

WSU School of Music to Give Special Program on Jan. 17

The Wichita State University School of Music will present "The Evening of Music" Friday, Jan. 17, at 8 p.m. in the newly remodeled Century II Concert Hall. The presentation is in conjunction with the gala opening of Wichita's civic cultural center, scheduled for the week of Jan. 11.

Nearly 300 students and faculty members will perform during the evening. Music groups participating in the concert include the University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of James Robertson; the WSU Symphonic Band, conducted by James Kerr; the University Singers, under the direction of Robert Hines; and the A Cappella Choir, directed by Thomas A. Miller.

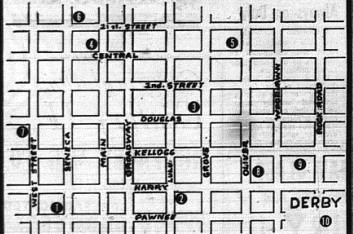

Other performing groups are the faculty woodwind quintet, faculty string quartet, faculty brass quartet and the Chamber Music Society of the University of Wichita. The Chamber Music Society is a group of students and faculty members who perform a variety of chamber music. The faculty woodwind quintet is directed by David Child, assistant professor of music. The faculty string quartet is directed by James Kerr, professor of music. The faculty brass quartet is directed by Thomas A. Miller, professor of music.

A special work, "City of the Sun" was composed by the WSU School of Music for this concert. It will be performed by the University Singers, the A Cappella Choir, the University Symphony Orchestra and the faculty woodwind quintet.

"Royal Hunt of the Sun" to Start Jan. 15 Community Theater Taking Huge Stride in Its Move to Century II

From the corner of Topoka and Central to the theater of Century II doesn't seem far, but it is a long journey in terms of city blocks.

The Wichita Community Theater has traveled quite a distance in the 22 years since its first play was staged in the old Unitarian Church at the first named address to its new performing locale at Century II.

In 1946 it was called the Experimental Theater, and there was no charge for admission to plays. Contributions were placed in milk cartons, and the church auditorium seated 125.

Throughout its 22-year history, other changes of name have taken place. In 1960 the name of the organization was changed to Wichita Community Theater. And two years later performances were moved to Winer Auditorium at the University of Wichita.

It may surprise there will be even more changes when WCT moves to Century II this month. Beginning with "Royal Hunt of the Sun," each production will be presented for eight nights, instead of the usual run of five.

The Jan. 15 opening performance will add one night to the running time of
